COURSE DESCRIPTION

INTENDED LEARNING OUTCOMES

CB6	To acquire knowledge that can act as the basis for the original development and/ or application of ideas mainly in research contexts.
CB9	To ensure that students are able to effectively communicate their conclusions and the reasons that underpin them to specialist and non-specialist audiences in a clear and unambiguous manner.
CE9	To be able to assimilate different technical approaches and to apply the main methodological techniques to a body of data in order to obtain results which result in original theoretical findings in the field of English linguistics.
CG1	To know how to identify research questions and provide answers by means of developing a research project.
CG4	To be able to understand and apply the models and advanced methods of qualitative and quantitative analysis in the area of the corresponding subject.
CT1	To know how to manage the sources of scientific information and useful resources for study and research.
CT3	Ability to obtain information, design experiments and interpret behavioral results.
CT4	To be able to write and present the results of their own research in the form of a scientific article before a specialized audience.
CT5	To act professionally respecting human rights, the principles of universal accessibility for persons with disabilities, respect for fundamental rights of equality and in accordance with the values of a culture of peace and democratic ideals.

OBJECTIVES

The main objectives of this course are the following:

- To introduce students to linguistic theory, exploring the basic tenets of functionalist, cognitive and/or constructionist approaches.
- To analyze the relevance of constructions from a psycholinguistic point of view, exploring the implications of a construction-based approach for language processing and language acquisition.
- To explore the idea that argument structure constructions are a special subclass of constructions that provide the basic means of clausal expression in a language (Goldberg 1995).
- To explore the relationship between grammar and the lexicon, trying to account for regularities between semantico-pragmatic interpretation and morphosyntactic structure in English.

CONTENT

1. Theory contents

Introduction: Constructions within functional-cognitive space

- 1.1. The original Goldbergerian definition of construction.
- 1.2. Constructions in Cognitive Grammar.
- 1.3. Why do we need constructions as distinct abstract entities? Filling the gap between grammar, language acquisition and language processing
- 1.4. Language learning in adult and child developing grammar

Clarifications:

This course will follow a continuous assessment process. Regular attendance is required. The requirement of regular attendance means that the student must be present for at least 80% of the class time. Otherwise, the student will have to take a test at the end of the module.

In addition, students will need to write an assignment on one of the topics of the syllabus. They will be able to choose between:

- (i) An essay or discussion on one of the topics using specialized bibliography (3,500 words)
- (ii) A short applied research work (between 3,500 and 4,000 words).

Part-time students should take a final exam.
