OBJECTIVES

This course is intended to make students achieve a competent user level (C1) as described in the Common European Framework of Reference for Languages (CEFR). Therefore, students will have to review some grammatical topics and consolidate their linguistic knowledge (grammatical, lexical and discursive) and competence at that level. That implies that at the end of the course students will be able to:

- Understand extended speech even when it is not clearly structured and when relationships are only implied and not signalled explicitly.
- Understand a wide range of demanding, longer texts (factual and literary), and recognise their implicit meaning.
- Express themselves fluently and spontaneously without much obvious searching for expressions.
- Use the language in a flexible and effective way for different social, academic and professional purposes.
- Formulate ideas and opinions with precision and relate their contribution skilfully to those of other speakers
- Produce clear, well-structured, detailed texts on complex subjects, showing controlled use of organisational patterns, connectors and cohesive devices and developing particular points and rounding them off with an appropriate conclusion.
- Express themselves in clear, well-structured texts, expressing points of view at some length, write about complex subjects, underlining the salient issues and can select style appropriate to the reader in mind.

CONTENT

1. Theoretical content

The theoretical contents of the course will consist in a selection of grammatical topics, which will be also analysed and practised in context. Eastwood (1994), Leech and Svartvik (2002) and Cunningham and Bell (2014) are essential sources.

1. Time, tense and aspect:

- Time and tense

- Aspect

2. The Noun phrase:

- Determiners

- Quantifiers

- Subject-verb agreement

3. Modal auxiliaries: levels of certainty about the past, present and future.

4. The passive: impersonal report structures

5. Conditionals: basic and non-basic forms

2. Practical contents

Practical sessions will be devoted to the practise of communicative skills and vocabulary expansion, following the course textbook and other printed and online resources. There will be two types of activities:

1. Linguistic formulae and vocabulary

2. Communicative skills:

2.1. Reading comprehension and written production (mainly short story and short essay), focusing on such aspects as textual organization and the use of discursive markers.

2.2. Oral production and spoken interaction. The following linguistic functions will be reinforced:

- Telling a story

- Making your point in discussions

- Presenting information: a short talk

- Giving advice

METHODOLOGY

General clarifications on the methodology. (optional)

Methodology: The methodology will be based on practising communicative situations so that students develop their skills and become competent users of English at level C1. The acquisition of grammatical knowledge and the expansion of vocabulary will also be promoted through both interactive lectures and practice.

Part-time students who cannot carry out the activities developed neither in the theoretical nor in the practical sessions of the course will be required to pass a final test at the end of the semester. There will be no methodological adaptations for part-time students but students following this learning modality must contact the lecturer at the beginning of the course.

Assessment will be summative and continuous and requires a positive attitude and active involvement on the student's part.

Attendance to at least 80% of the small-group sessions is required to be assessed on the 20% that corresponds to:

- a) class activities (presenciales): progress tests
- b) autonomous learning activities (no presenciales): written compositions

It is also necessary to:

(1) obtain a 5 over 10 in the final exam, which will include: a written composition (long-answer test) and short-answer test on Grammar and use of English. The exam is 60% of the global mark.

(2) obtain at least 5 over 10 in the rest of evaluation instruments: final oral test (10%), listening quizzes (10%) which will sum up to 20% of the global mark.

Methodological adaptations for part-time students

Official part-time students who cannot carry out the activities developed neither in the theoretical nor in the practical sessions of the course will be required to pass a final test at the end of the semester.

There will be no methodological adaptations for part-time students but students following this learning modality must contact the lecturer at the beginning of the course.

General clarifications on instruments for evaluation:

Full-time students:

- Given the practical-theoretical nature of the course, attendance to at least 80% of the small group sessions will be compulsory to be evaluated in a continuous way. Students will be assessed by means of the five evaluation tools listed below if they attend regularly:

1. Final exam: 60%.

It will include short and long-response questions .

2.Oral tests: 10%

- Students will be assessed for group and individual tasks performed in the small-group sessions throughout the course. An average of the several tasks will be calculated for each student.

3.Listening comprehension tests: 10%

- The average grade will be obtained from at least two listening tests, those in which the student obtained the highest marks.

Students not attending at least to 80% of the small group sessions will not get a mark for neither the two assessment instruments below:

4.Written activities:10%

- At least two compositions to hand in for correction throughout the course.

5.Progress tests: 10%

- Several test on grammatical contents and use of English will be given throughout the course.

b) short-answer questions (test on Grammar and Use of English) (60%)

Part II: oral interview on one or several of the topics discussed through the course(20%)
