Ciudadanía, and from 2015 the double master's degree with the MA in Teaching in Secondary Education. From 1997 to 2003 vice-chair, Research Committee Political Philosophy,

International

Political Science Association. In 1999–01 and 2007–11 member of the executive, Asociación Española de Ética y Filosofía Política. From 2010 to 2014 associate researcher, Centre of Political

Thought and Conceptual Change (University of Jyväskylä), and since 2011 board member, Concepta:

International Research School in Conceptual History and Political Thought.

Author of Patriotismo, nacionalismo y ciudadanía (Bogotá: Universidad Externado de Colombia, 1997), Política cívica (Madrid: Centro de Estudios Políticos y Constitucionales, 1998), Ciudadanía, nacionalismo y derechos humanos (with J. Rubio and M. Toscano, Madrid: Trotta 2000), and La integración cívica de los inmigrantes (Barcelona: Horsori, 2014). With F.R. Dallmayr I have edited Beyond Nationalism? Sovereignty and Citizenship (Lanham-New York: Lexington Books, 2001); with

J. Rubio and M. Toscano, Retos pendientes en ética y política (Madrid: Trotta, 2002) and Democracia, ciudadanía y educación (Madrid, 2009); with L. Villar, La inmigración y las oportunidades de la ciudadanía (Bogotá: Universidad Externado de Colombia, 2005) and Las razones de la convivencia

(Bogotá: Universidad Externado de Colombia, 2007); with K. Palonen and T. Pulkkinen, Research

Companion to the Politics of Democratization in Europe (Farnham: Ashgate, 2008; London: Routledge, 2013); with M. Toscano, 'Rhetoric, Ethics and Democracy', Res Publica: Revista de Filosofía Política 27 (2012); with K. Palonen and T. Turkka, The Politics of Dissensus (Santander-Madrid: Cantabria University Press-McGraw-Hill, 2014); with K. Palonen, Parliamentarism and Democratic Theory (Opladen-Berlin-Toronto: Barbara Budrich Publishers, 2015).

A summary of the curriculum is published in <https://uma.academia.edu/JoseMariaRosales>

Seen in perspective, the past two decades describe the exploratory paths of a political philosophy scholar also engaged in moral philosophy via the study of human rights and immigration. I have practiced political philosophy with a growing attention to politics, history and the law. Such interdisciplinary endeavor has prompted early research into nationalism and civic issues, and a recent reappraisal of mainstream tenets in democratic theory through the history and politics of parliamentary democracy; the study of political rhetoric in parliamentary debates, and of political concepts combining advances in history of political thought with conceptual history resources. In other words, my current research interests are two: conceptual history and the link of parliamentarism to democratic theory. The former is a way of refining the study of the history of political thought. Along with other historiographical methods, it can help both to reduce anachronism in the practice of political philosophy and to improve the conceptual accuracy of its vocabulary. The latter is a way of retrieving the study of institutions to the theoretical study of democracy. Ever since the late eighties, I have been fortunate of working in teams, then led by Prof. José Rubio Carracedo in Spain, and in cooperation with Prof. Manuel Toscano, and since the early nineties of grounding that learning process on international cooperative networks. Initially thanks to Prof. Benjamin Barber at the IPSA Research Committee Political Philosophy from 1993, then followed by a fourteen-year cooperation with Prof. Luis Villar Borda since 1995. And the fruitful cooperation with Prof. Kari Palonen from 1993. Along with it, I've assumed academic responsibilities since 2001. Yet what makes sense to all this is my wholehearted involvement in teaching and the training of researchers, which arguably explains both the mistakes and achievements of my profession.

Teaching Experience

Ever since 1995, on an annual average of 21/24 credits, I have been gradually teaching most of the courses of the Moral Philosophy Area at the Schools of Philosophy and Communication; and more recently also at the BA in History. Over the few years, teaching also courses in three MA degrees.

From 2001 I have taught guest doctoral courses at universities from Argentina, Finland, Mexico, Norway, and Spain.

Current teaching duties, since the academic year 2015/2016, include three courses: Filosofía Política

(6 credits, Degree in Philosophy), Filosofía e Investigación Historiográfica (6 credits out of 18, Degree in History), Democracia y Derechos Humanos en Contextos No-Occidentales (2.5

credits,

Master's Degree in Cultura de Paz, Conflictos, Educación y Derechos Humanos); and three courses in English: Democratic Theory and Civic Ethics (6 credits, Degree in Philosophy), Advanced Issues in

Political Philosophy (3 credits, Master's Degree in Filosofía, Ciencia y Ciudadanía), Ethics, Rhetoric and Politics in the Græco-Roman World (3 credits, Master's Degree in Patrimonis Histórico y Literario de la Antigüedad).
